March: Special Events

As you can see, the month of March was packed with a variety of special events. Students demonstrated their scientific knowledge and understanding during the recent Science Fair; celebrated Mother's Day with a medley of songs and poems; engaged in healthy living activities; created and presented projects and models for the Islamic Fair; and exercised both their minds and bodies at Sports Day. Congratulations to all the participants, winners and organizers.

WRITING MATTERS

Using Mentor Texts

One way of showing students how to improve their writing is to use a mentor text. A mentor text is a published piece of writing that students use as a model to help them write the same form or format. Students first read the text to look at the author's sentence structure, syntax and vocabulary choices. In older grades, students also determine the author's style and how (s)he creates tone and mood. Once the text has been studied or deconstructed, students then set out to emulate, or copy, the author's choices to help them write their own piece.

There has been significant research conducted in the merits of using mentor texts. The results indicate that students are more successful in their first attempts at writing a new form or format when they can see and/or copy from an expert.

At CBS we are using mentor texts to assist our students as they explore a wide range of genres and formats. The process begins with shared and guided reading before moving to modelled and independent writing. Learning how to write is every bit as important as knowing what to write.

Some examples of how we have used mentor texts in our classrooms are outlined below. In Senior Kindergarten and Grade 1, students used simple fairy tales to help them write their own stories. In Grade 3, students identified and followed patterns to create their own patterned poems while students in Grade 10 studied magazine and their covers before designing their own.

Studying and emulating a published author provides the support needed for second language writers as they work to improve both the what and the how of their writing. To that end, we hope that you enjoy the writing samples in this month's edition of the Express. Happy reading!

Interviewer: Would you say you are independent? Me: looks at mum, mum nods Me: I'd say so, yes.

Calling All Student Writers

Students from SK to Grade 12 had the opportunity to sit in 'the author's chair' as we celebrated Young Author's Day. Students were placed in mixed groupings and assigned to a teacher. They moved to designated locations around the school to listen to and share their writing. In many cases, students self-selected the piece they wished to read which included short stories, poems, reports, speeches and book reviews. Each session was capped off with a piece of writing shared by the teacher. Congratulations to all of our student writers and teachers for their efforts in making Young Author's Day a resounding success.

Interviewed: Haya

Haya was born on May 4, 2016 in Kuwait. She describes herself as friendly, outgoing, really quiet person and if you get to know her she tends to open up and sometimes acts crazy. Haya has seven people in her family. One of her favorite memories growing up was the day she was allowed to get a pet, and she got a cat. Haya likes to play PlayStation and see her friends. Haya wants to be a doctor because she wants to help people. Haya loves animals a lot and she feeds animals on the street whenever she can because they do not have houses and owners that can look after them.

Interesting facts

Haya has long brown hair and brown eyes. She loves to dance even though she doesn't really know how. Haya told me she is sometimes lazy and energetic when she sees her friends. She is not a patient person and is obsessed with cats and kittens.

Early life and school

When Haya was little she never used to be around a lot of girls as she grew up with boys and her brothers. Haya likes school but is really shy and nervous. She likes to annoy me and finds school work really exciting in certain subjects.

Haya wants to be a famous dermatologist when she goes to study and she would like to make a lot of money and help people in need and she would like to make people feel beautiful through her work.

My autobiography

Getting through a day can be hard without motivation. I find that I can face each day of my high school life easier whenever I think about my plans and big dreams. It is one of the reasons I believe I feel like I live for my dreams. I am young and ambitious but I believe that even a teenager should reflect on his high school life. If more youth set their goals and review their routines as high school students, they would be able to achieve more success. This paper will reflect on my own life as a high school student to serve as a reminder that I am living for my dreams and that I can gain success. It will also serve as an inspiration to my peers who aim for success.

Being a happy high school student would not be possible without my family. I am a child of two supportive parents. My father is an engineer who is a representative at a local technology company and my mother is an Arts teacher. They work hard to support our family and do their best to spend time bonding whenever they can. My family values loyalty and responsibility. This is the reason I always try to be honest with my family and tell them my high school activities. It is also why I believe that if more high school students are honest with their parents, they would struggle less with their academic and extra-curricular goals. Living with a supportive family encourages me to dream and aim for good grades and a good career.

Every day when I go to school I attend all my classes to learn more. I believe that in each lesson there are insights I can gain. I always strive to gain an understanding of our lessons with the resources I have. I take notes to jot down my misunderstandings so that I can find it in the library or online. I can say that I am a responsible high school student who takes my studies seriously because I want to achieve my dreams.

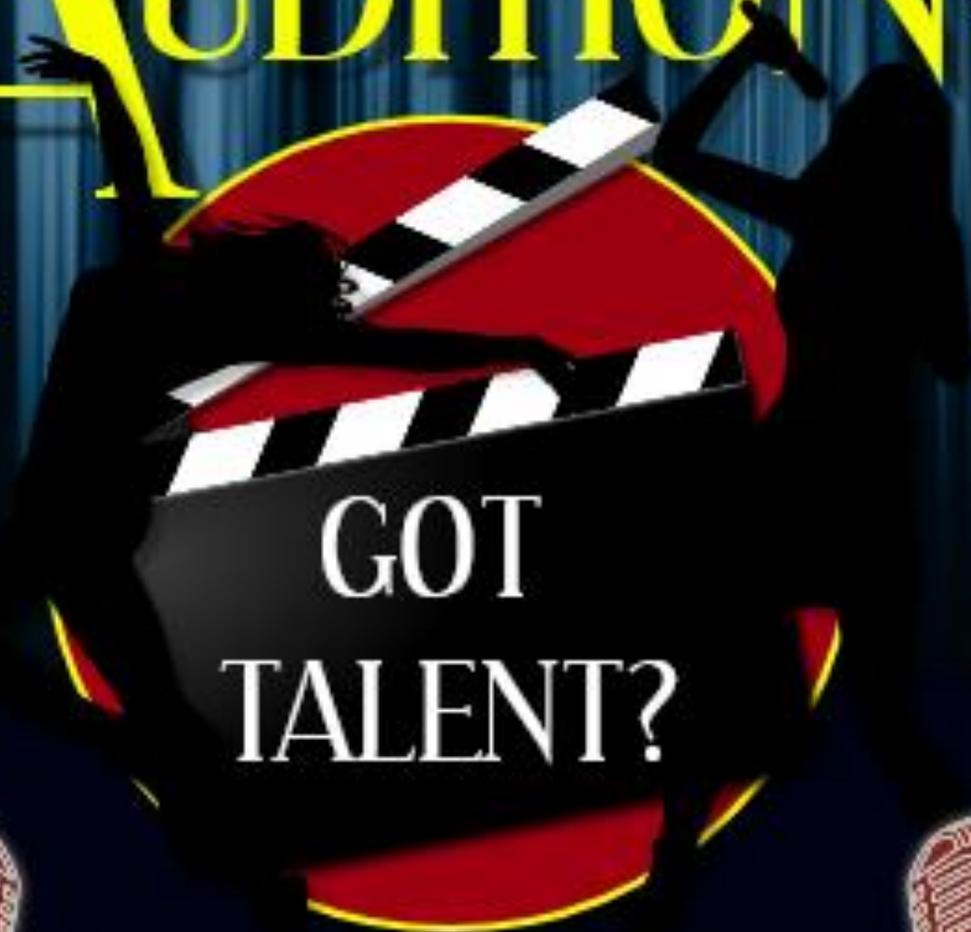

As a high school student, I also enjoy time with my friends. In between classes and sometimes after school, I go out with the gang. We eat food, watch movies, talk a lot, and listen to music. We participate in school events together and a few are with me in club activities. Sometimes I struggle balancing time for family, studies, and friends. There are a ton of times I chose to have a sleepover or check out a new club with the gang over more important activities. I will work on my time management more so that I can accomplish goals that should be prioritized. I realize now that to grasp my dreams I should have friends but I should also manage my time with them well.

To be a successful high school student is not hard but finding motivation can be hard at times. Being motivated helps the youth believe that dreams are possible. All that needs to be done is to value one's family, studies, and friends. With a positive outlook on the people and environment of a youth's life, he can overcome struggles like difficult teachers or lack of time management. He can live for his dream and succeed. These are the beliefs that are shaping my life as a high school student now. I will always use this paper to help me review what motivates me to live for my dream. I can only hope that it will inspire my friends.
